For Immediate Release

This September Underway Studio present Printed Spaces, a fully screen printed show exploring the architecture of London's cultural spaces. From galleries to music venues, many of these structures have been repurposed over the years becoming part of the fabric that makes up our city. In recent times some of these spaces have come under threat from property developers and new laws. Underway Studio aim to show the importance of these venues today in adding to London's cultural diversity and rich history.

Underway Studio is an illustration and printmaking collective based in West London. Founded in 2015 by six graduates as a space to continue working and developing as young designers, the collective works collaboratively across silk-screen, lino and digital print mediums. The current members of Underway are: Aiden Barefoot, Anna Schmidt, Caitlin Parks, Hazel Bryer and Melissa North.

Architecture, form, texture and colour are the main influences behind Underway Studio's work. The use of physical print processes means their visual language is both playful and distinctive, incorporating photography, collage, drawing and any happy accidents along the way.

About Studio 73

Located in the heart of Brixton Village, Studio 73 art gallery was founded in 2010. It has since built a strong reputation showcasing some of London's most influential artists and a wide range of affordable art.

Its most successful art exhibitions include "Cover Version", "Icon/ic Show", "Life in the Deep Blue: Creation out of Rawness" and "Overstand: Postcolonial Sampler".

Over the years, Studio 73's programme has developed both from a local and an international perspective, making screen printed art a fundamental part of its brand while also expanding its focus to gradually include performance and installation. Its unique position in Brixton Village allows Studio 73 to reach a high volume of audiences from a variety of backgrounds.

Studio 73 artists include : Martin Grover, Caroline Harper, Priscilla Watkins, Jason Gibilaro, Kris Lamorena, Oli Fowler, Jaykoe, Neil Kenlock, Chris Makin, Reggy Liu.
